It was last Nov. 1 that I was at [ ] and I thought it was about time I checked on the status of their activities. They have no active work in progress now but there is some holdover action on completed work. Of the 8 or more proposals submitted by [ ] in the past year, none of them have been favorably acted on. (accepted)

So, [ ] is rather disenchanted with the possibility of doing any further work for your operation. The only currently active item is your request that [ ] provide technical support in WDC for operation of the Multiple Image Correlator. They are having some difficulty responding to that request because business is booming for them. The people who would be capable of providing that support were assigned to long term projects last December and to take them off now would seriously affect continuity of the work.

[ ] appears sincere in their desire to support the MIC and they feel it is important to send the right people to do the job and not someone who is not intimately familiar with the equipment.

[ ] Sat before last and reviewed all their proposals, so they do not feel there is anything outstanding on which they have not been informed of the disposition.

There two pieces of equipment at [ ] which require some action for disposition. They are the Multiple Image Correlator and its chip cutter and the GIANT.

[ ] has heard that [ ] contract for a Reseau printer for [ ] was cancelled and that the work was given to Eastman Kodak. He is disappointed that they were not asked to rebid since they have a letter from [ ] saying that their proposal was good but the price was high. He feels that their price would be competitive with EK. ? the where is the work?

[ ] is bidding on a request from the Air Force at Rome to develop a Multiple Image Correlator. It will be an extensive program and will probably run about half a million dollars altogether. Do you want more specific information on the sponsor or are you already informed on this program. Typical of action
